

Next Slide →

From Island 20024 • Year High: 187% • To pass you need at least 75% We have your Island score

copy

You're getting there! Review your feedback before trying again.

Fast-paced work—your understanding of attack vectors versus attack surfaces, security hardening, attacker's reducing attack vectors shows real mastery of the cyber attacker perspective! Keep building on this strong move forward.

3. What is the difference between an attack vector and an attack surface?

● An attack vector refers to the pathways attackers use to penetrate security defenses; an attack surface refers to all the vulnerabilities of an asset that can be exploited.

 Share report

2. What are examples of security hardening? Select three answers.

- ☐ Hacking all user passwords

⊕ Missed work

- Keeping systems patched and updated

⊕ Initial network

- Disabling unused network ports

 Share page

3. Which steps are applied when using an attacker mindset? Select three answers.

817 pages

☒ Determine how a target can be accessed

⊕ Missed work

2. Evaluate a target's attack vectors.

 Share now

© 2010 Blackwell Publishing Ltd

4. How can businesses reduce the number of attack vectors they must defend? Select three answers.

[illegible]

☐ By implementing security controls that protect information

⊕ Missed work

☐ By educating users so they can participate in preventing attacks.

More work

Recent online

3. Idea work

İhtiyaç duyulmaktadır.