1. When does the Executing Phase officially begin in a project?

1 / 1 point

- ☐ When the project team completes the first deliverable
- ☒ When the project management plan is approved by the sponsor and accepted by key stakeholders
- ☐ When all procurement contracts are finalized
- ☐ When lessons learned are documented

Correct

The Executing Phase begins after formal approval of the Project Management Plan. This marks the transition from planning to doing, when the team starts producing deliverables.

2. What is the primary purpose of a Communications Management Plan?

1 / 1 point

- ☐ To establish project cost baselines
- ☐ To outline procurement responsibilities
- ☒ To describe how, when, and by whom information about the project will be administered and disseminated
- ☐ To identify technical specifications for project deliverables

Correct

The main function of a Communications Management Plan is to ensure that project information is distributed appropriately, on schedule, and by designated individuals.

3. What is the main purpose of periodic work performance reports, such as status reports?

1 / 1 point

- ☐ To record historical data for use after project closure
- ☐ To track only financial information related to the project
- ☐ To meet audit requirements at the end of the project
- ☒ To support better decision making, identify issues, define actions, and create stakeholder awareness

Correct

According to the Project Management Institute (PMI), periodic work performance reports, including status reports, enable informed decisions, timely issue resolution, and improved stakeholder communication.

4. What is the main purpose of using communication style assessments such as Emergenetics, Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), or DiSC in the workplace?

1 / 1 point

- ☐ To determine who should lead a project team
- ☐ To measure intelligence and job performance
- ☒ To help managers adapt their communication approach to better connect with others
- ☐ To assign people to permanent personality categories

Correct

These assessments are designed to improve communication and trust by helping managers recognize different thinking and interaction styles, then adapt their delivery accordingly.

5. According to the Power and Interest Model, how should stakeholders with high power and high interest be managed?

1 / 1 point

- ☐ They should receive minimal communication to save time
- ☒ They should be closely managed through regular communication and engagement
- ☐ They should be kept satisfied but not involved in daily communication
- ☐ They should only be contacted during major project issues

Correct

High-power and high-interest stakeholders, such as sponsors or executives, can strongly influence project success and must be kept actively engaged and informed.
